

C.P. JUBILEE TRAIN LEAVES FOR VANCOUVER

Colorful Ceremony as Dominion Limited Leaves Montreal

MONTREAL, June 29.—The Dominion Limited left Windsor station last night to the roll of drums and the peal of a silver bell. It started toward Vancouver on the route over which the first Canadian Pacific passenger train made its way to the Pacific coast half a century ago.

Ottawa, North Bay, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver. At each stop, hundreds of people crowded the station platforms and heard the station master call the names of the cities which the train visits in the building of the Canadian Pacific railway.

An impressive ceremony as the brightly-decorated locomotive pulled out of the station, with a huge birthday cake with 50 electric candles was cut and as the drums of the Victoria Rifles band rolled the giant drivers of the Dominion Limited began to turn. The band played God Save the King.

WAVED FAREWELL. Before waving farewell, then came the strains of "The Girl I Left Behind Me" and the Dominion Limited was on its way, heading westward on the steel ribbons that stretch to the Pacific coast.

"From sea to sea." That was the message of the Golden Anniversary train that commemorated the departure of the first transcontinental train.

"Fifty years ago the first through passenger train left Montreal for the shores of the Pacific ocean," said D. C. Coleman, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific railway.

"That event set the final seal on the Confederation. It made effective the physical and the economic union of eastern and western Canada."

GUARD OF HONOR. Out of the past came memories of that first train Canada. At that train's departure too, men of the Victoria Rifles formed the guard of honor and Windsor station was lit with flags and bunting.

Major Coleman, himself out of the past, brought out a silver birthday cake with a silver knife. Then to the assembled crowd this message from His Majesty the King was read:

"I sincerely thank all those associated with the Canadian Pacific Railway Company for their loyal assurances on the occasion of the 50th anniversary of this great railway, which, ever since its inception, has been a constant source of pride in the development of the Dominion of Canada."

Squatters Battle With Hand Axes

OTTAWA, June 29.—Alex. Mellick, 38, two Polish squatters in the "Hole" at Hardman's bridge, near here, were in hospital under police guard last night after they attacked themselves with hand axes during an argument over a broken window. They were suffering from serious head injuries, deep cuts to the face, arms and legs.

Every bar on the human or animal body has a weak point. This is shown in the action of the hand axes. The cut, through muscle and skin, causes the brain to be back when angry or excited.

ANOTHER ENTHUSIASTIC OWNER REPORTS ON HIS NEW DODGE

"BEAUTY WINNER OF 1936"

... "given me excellent satisfaction" says MR. E. J. SIEGNER, STRATFORD, ONT.

THE Dodge D3 Touring Sedan which I bought in March... has in 5000 miles driving given me excellent satisfaction.

"After 1000 miles driving, on a 215 mile trip, half of which was in snow and on wet pavement, the gasoline consumption was slightly less than 10 gallons for this trip."

"The hydraulic brakes with which this car is equipped make it a safe car for anyone to drive in heavy traffic. Two of my daughters have learned to operate this car and find it easily controlled."

"I have driven eight cars since 1913 an average of over fifty thousand miles each, and I can say that the Dodge D3 is the best I have ever driven."

BIRTHDAY OF TOC H FETED IN ENGLAND

Duke of Kent Traces Development of Movement In Address

LONDON, June 29.—ToC H, a movement which began in a dugout in Poperinghe, on the Ypres road, in 1915, Sunday celebrated its coming-of-age in the Crystal Palace.

In an address at the ceremony of "lighting the lamp," the Duke of Kent traced the development of the movement through the Empire from its humble beginning to its present stage, remarking that Canada now has 38 ToC H units and two houses, South Africa 87 units and one house, and Australia 140 units and one house.

MESSAGE FROM KING. He read a message from the King conveying his sincere greetings and congratulations, and recalling that from the earliest years of the movement he had participated in the lighting of the lamp of movement.

The objects of the ToC H movement are to "perpetuate the lessons of cheerful self-sacrifice and mutual help, without barriers of class or creed, taught by their lives during the Great War." The symbolism of the lamp represents the keeping alive of the "ideals which they em-bodyed."

TOC H STIMULATED. Referring to the recent visit of "Tubby" Clayton—Rev. P. B. Clayton, founder of the movement—to the eastern Mediterranean, the Duke said it had stimulated ToC H in that part of the world, where many of its members are drawn from the army, navy and air force.

League Protocols Described As Poor "Peace" Insurance

LONDON, June 29.—League of Nations protocols and regional agreements were described as poor "peace insurance" by Field Marshal Sir Philip Cleave, Sunday at the annual review of the United Service Corps, an organization of men who have served terms of enlistment in His Majesty's forces.

"It is up to us to show how desperately dangerous the situation is at the present time," he declared. "Full ranks all over the empire are the greatest insurance against war."

He better than all the league's speeches, protocols and regional agreements and all the rest of that nonsense we have heard so much about lately.

Mussolini and Hitler have shown they are worth no more than scraps of paper," he asserted. "You must with the example you set, are getting that sort of nonsense out of the head of our young men."

Dunning and Euler On Way to England On Trade Mission

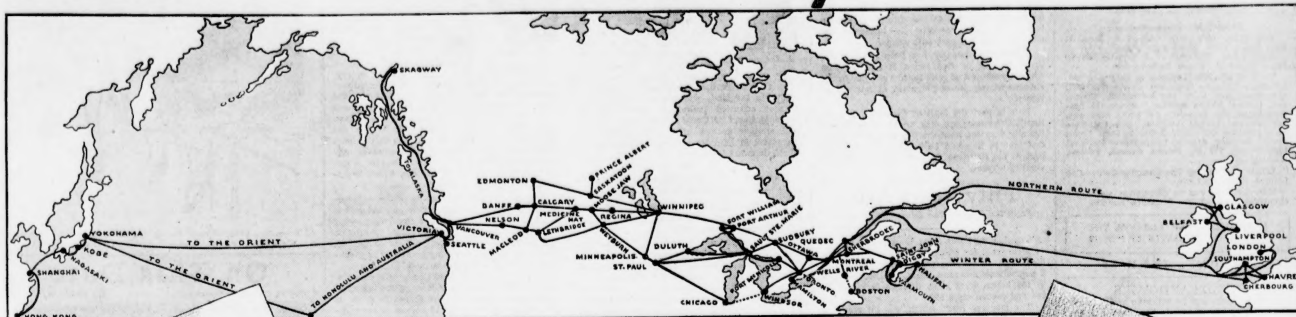

Minister of Finance Will Endeavor to Sell More of Canada's Surplus Wheat

OTTAWA, June 29.—The pilgrimage of cabinet ministers from Ottawa has begun. Mr. Dunning, minister of finance, and Hon. W. D. Euler, minister of trade and commerce, have sailed for England and most of the other ministers are in the provinces they represent.

Premier Mackenzie King has remained

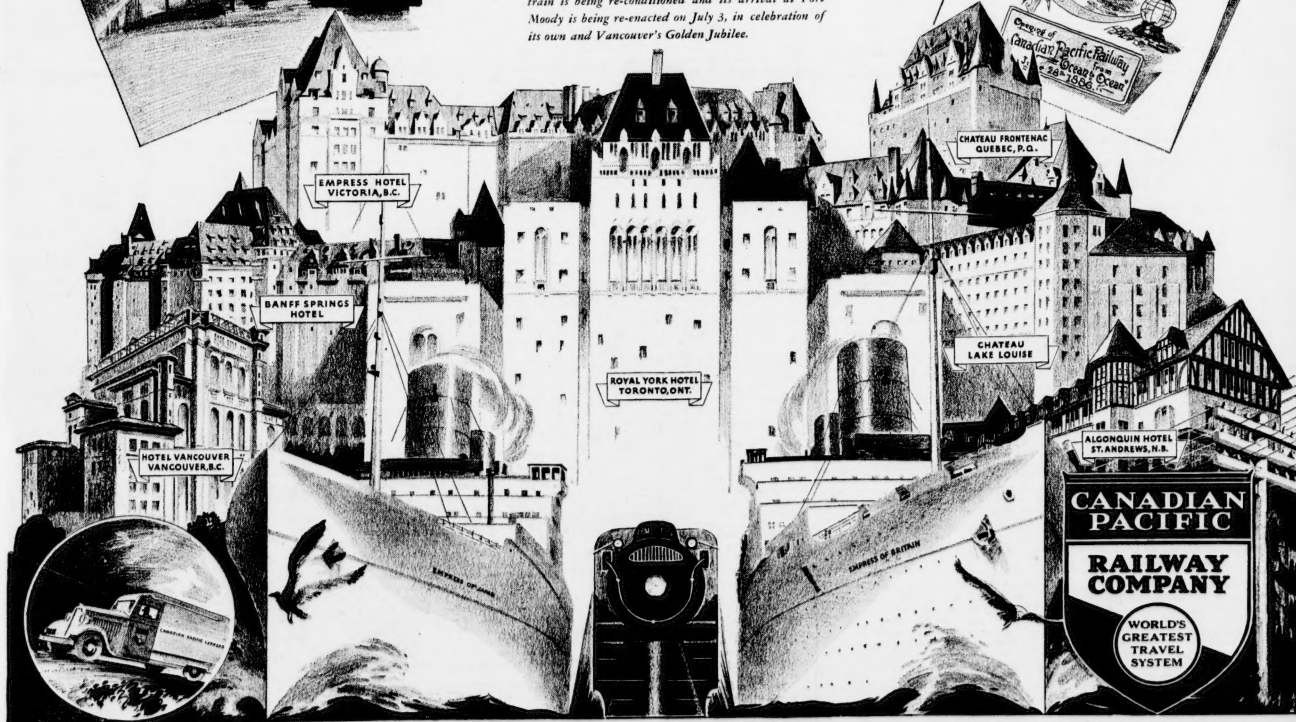

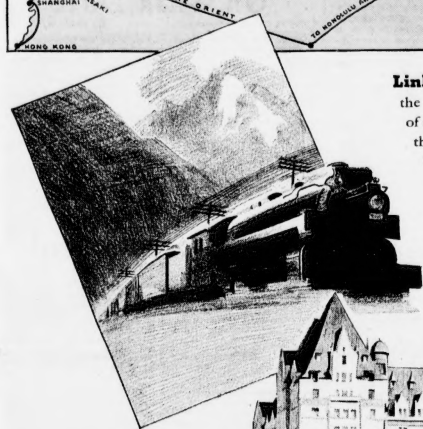

FIFTY YEARS AGO

1886 and to-day 1936

Link of Empire. When the *first trans-continental train from Montreal rolled over the new steel path to the Pacific, fifty years ago, it carried the destinies of a nation — of an Empire! For the newly-completed Canadian Pacific Railway not only formed the visible link of the newly confederated Provinces, it opened the way to unbroken world-communications within the Empire — a fact of profound significance in Imperial policy. If a united Empire has stood as the bulwark of civilization in the succeeding years, a vital contribution to that unity was made by the men of faith and courage who planned and built the Canadian Pacific Railway fifty years ago.

The original equipment of the first trans-continental train is being re-conditioned and its arrival at Port Moody is being re-enacted on July 3, in celebration of its own and Vancouver's Golden Jubilee.*

HEADS AND TAILS

Mayor Clarke says he will take his semi-monthly pay instalments in "prosperity bonds." The aldermen are to take theirs in the same, and may agree. That is good news for the taxpayers. If they can pass the bonds along, the taxpayers will be nothing out. If the bonds do not pass, the Mayor and aldermen will stand the loss.

How the city is to get the bonds to pay the councilmen, is not stated. Presumably the Mayor will be turned over to the Government in lieu of part of the money grant due to the city each month in relief account—the Government keeping that much of the cash sent along by the Dominion for this purpose.

The arrangement looks like a happy one from the taxpayer's standpoint. Heads, the Government wins. Tails, the Mayor and aldermen lose. The taxpayer will benefit by learning from the experience how far the bond scheme is really workable.

THE UNIVERSITY

The University is losing another valued instructor, Dr. MacLeod, professor of civil engineering, who goes to take a similar position in the University of British Columbia.

Things are going badly at present with the University of Alberta. There is an indication of ignoring the Government for a long term of years is being demolished. A half dozen outstanding men have gone elsewhere in recent months. That is a fine tribute to their worth, and to the high quality of the faculty of which they have been members. But it creates a very serious situation in that area, as the University and the University authorities to deal with.

Albertans will expect and require that their University be kept on its feet. It was waited on the line traditions it has established. To do that, men of more than usual ability have to be found to fill the all too numerous vacancies now being created in the teaching staff.

ANOTHER DIFFICULTY

The unemployment problem disclosed a new difficulty when the Government was waited on by a delegation of relief-men at Drumheller.

The Minister explained the plan to pay relief workers $40 a month, and the amount to be paid back to support them and their families next winter. Spokenmen for the delegation did not think the plan would be attractive to unemployed men in that area, as those with large families are now receiving more than $40 a month as relief. The delegation was told there was any way to get the proposal may remain on relief as at present.

The kind of relief system we have in Canada is like a church bazaar—easy to get into but hard to get out of. If the Drumheller program was correctly reported, the road-building program does not seem likely to accomplish the object of transferring men in large numbers from relief to wages—and a road-building program has been generally accepted as the best way the Government could go about that task.

Unless men can earn more by working than they can without working, the inducement to get to work is very obviously absent.

GIVE THEM A CHANCE

AM. Fostle would disfranchise men who "play" to remain on relief permanently.

No great objection might be made if there were any way to break the indifference that is in the human mind and decide unerringly who are and who are not "planning" to live with work. But there is no way to do that. And if there were any way to do it, the proper course would be to cut the "non-workers" off relief—not to leave them on the list and take away their votes.

Most of the unemployed people in Edmonton, all but a small fraction of them, are unemployed because they cannot do any work to do. They are accepting relief as a last, desperate and distasteful expedient to keep alive—not because they prefer to live on the allowances and avoid work.

If council has any doubts on that score—why not offer the unemployed something to do? What has the provincial council done to find out who wants to work and who wants to live without work? Practically, almost absolutely, nothing.

Where then is the warrant for any member of council to make a sweeping charge that Edmonton is being exploited for relief by any considerable number of people who would not take jobs if they were offered them? Or where is the public policy in proposing that people be disfranchised—but kept on relief—in the unenviable assurance that they would not work if they were given a chance?

THAT WOULD HELP

The newspapers, the radio, and other means of publicity have been brought into use by the city council to urge taxpayers to pay their taxes, current and arrears. The need is apparent, the course would be the regular one to pay or be sued. It cannot be parried. It is to be hoped the response may be general, and the collections larger.

The prospect of that would be very much better if council offered the man in arrears some financial inducement to pay up. It is true the interest charged on arrears has been reduced from seven per cent to six. But the interest applies only to the future. The seven per cent compound penalty paid up against the delinquent in the past still stands.

Where that penalty has been going for three or four or five years, it totals a sum which no amount of civic loyalty can pay in the absence of regular employment at fairly good wages.

It is in part the fault of the city that more than 2,000 homes are now in arrears. Since the city did not want the property, which in part it it, it would be better to forego some part of the fictitious penalty and get the principal of arrears.

The resignation of Mr. King has created an extraordinary situation. Should Mr. Meighen accept the position of premier, he would immediately lose his seat in the House. His ministers would likewise lose their seats, and the new government would be in a minority unless it could secure support from the Liberals or Progressives. The predicament might be eased by the appointment of acting ministers without salaries, a makeshift arrangement which could not last long.

POEMS THAT LIVE

ODE

We are the music-makers,

And we are the dreamers of dreams,

And singing by the wayside, when we are tired, of life's pains.

World-lovers and world-forsakers

On either side the pale moon gleams:

Or else, where some more mellow sheweth

The World for ever, it seems.

With wonderful deathless duties

We build up the world's great cities,

And out of a fabulous story

We fashion an empire's glory.

One man with a dream, of pleasure,

Shall go forth and conquer a crown;

And three with a new song's measure

Can trample an empire down.

We, in the ages lying

Between the buried past and the bright

And belated with our prophesy

And elsewhere with our prophesy

For each one a dream that is dying,

Or one that is coming to birth.

The Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER

A Canadian government, headed by the grandson of a former rebel and now in possession of the Criminal Code.

No private home may now be entered by police on suspicion that it contains seditious literature. No Canadian is held to be guilty until he proves his innocence, nor faces twenty years imprisonment if he is found guilty of importing or selling a book advocating revolution. No one risks imprisonment and deportation for attending a seditious gathering.

Cases of sedition will be dealt with by the laws against seditious; not under the special powers of Section 98. Men of every spirited youth go through that phase when first he realizes the power of predatory wealth in the land—will receive similar grace to that accorded predatory wealth by the Supreme Court of Canada last year, when it held another section of the Code aimed at racketeers in industry to be outside the scope of the Criminal Code.

The surest way to make seditionists to be enacted harsh and arbitrary laws. The best way to get spirited youth over their indignation is to let them get it out of their system by the release of speech and writing.

Men who make seditionists are those who under the protection of the government have invoked Section 98, pay $500,000 to get hold of a textile industry, induced the government to impose high protection, and paid themselves $150,000 per annum. The government, with corresponding increase in the value of their capital holdings.

The vicious circle of exploitation is completed by having a government arrest, imprison and deport those who agitate against such organized robbery.

The textile exploiters are not the only robbers of today. The same method is often the same men—dominate every major industry in the Dominion.

Men advocating socialism are often working for a condition of affairs where socialism would be impossible. There can be no socialism in a land where there is no exploitation and no tyranny. Section 98 is of no use when men get employment at fair wages, with reasonable leisure and a fair share of the products of toil.

An insight into the judicial mind is afforded by two sentences recently administered by Mr. Justice A. M. Manson, the most recent appointment to the Supreme Court bench in the Pacific province.

In the one case a man, in a drunken fury, beat his 20 months old child to death with a wooden bridge. In the second case, a man was convicted on circumstantial evidence of setting fire to a wooden bridge near his home. He had been seen in the vicinity before the fire. Oil drums and footprints were traced to his home.

The man who beat his child to death with the wooden bridge was given a life term. The man who was convicted on circumstantial evidence of setting fire to a wooden bridge near his home was sentenced to prison for life. The distinction is obviously between the value of property and the value of human life.

Both sentences have given rise to protest. The Fire Underwriters Association have protested the life sentences for the man suspected of setting fire to the wooden bridge. They think a sentence so severe will make juries refuse to convict in arson cases. The sentence in the case of the child is being appealed by the Government of B.C.

Medical treatment over premature death comes. We may yet have a time when science will ward off most of our ills until the inevitable wearing-out of the body occurs. Perhaps the best of these is the case of the old man who committed suicide two years ago. He was 70 years old and had been married for 40 years. He was a very good man, and his death was a great loss to his family.

The British Medical Journal this month has published a case of a man who committed suicide. He was 70 years old and had been married for 40 years. He was a very good man, and his death was a great loss to his family.

The case points to a question for those who believe the soul leaves the body on the instant of death," writes Dr. Alfred A. Masser in reporting the case.

Shedding water that puls with excellent temper in good steel is very hard on the teeth. Mary had gone to the dentist to have 24 teeth extracted. Dr. Masser was called in to administer chloroform. Under the light of the chloroform, Dr. Masser was called in to administer chloroform. Under the light of the chloroform, Dr. Masser was called in to administer chloroform.

"The head was immediately lowered, artificial respiration started, and strychnine was given on hypodermic needles. The patient was then placed on his back, and the head was lowered. The patient was then placed on his back, and the head was lowered. The patient was then placed on his back, and the head was lowered.

"While this was being carried on, I massaged her through the diaphragm from beneath the costal margin. No response of any sort occurred. I decided to try an intracardiac injection of 'icora,' plunging a long needle into the left ventricle about the level of the fourth space, and slowly injected the 'icora'.

"Immediately after this, the massage through the diaphragm was continued, and in about one minute I could see the pulsation in the external jugular vein of the neck.

"After another ten minutes of artificial respiration the breathing recommenced and the pulse at the wrist gradually returned. Her condition gradually improved, but I decided to continue the use of the anesthetic with open ether, and the dentist proceeded to remove twenty-four teeth."

Two days later Miss Devenport was back at work. She remembers nothing of the experience. There were no dreams under the chloroform. Her brain cells registered no reaction to what death is like, for during her

Those Who Suffer In Silence

By DOCTOR FRANK MCCOY

Patients with hemorrhoids very often undergo considerable discomfort, although usually they remain silent on the subject of their disease, hesitating to discuss their symptoms in any way. This attitude is easily understood; however, it may prevent them from finding out

A hemorrhoid is merely an enlarged vein and such enlargement is the result of an interference with the normal flow of blood away from the rectal region. The veins in this particular part are especially likely to enlarge because they do not contain the usual valves found in other veins which keep the blood from flowing backward.

Usually, when one hemorrhoid forms, several others will also form, and the resultant suffering will then rob the patient of physical comfort and at the same time is likely to have a profound effect upon the nervous system. There are few parts of the body where the nerves are so sensitive as they are in this particular area, and pressure on these nerves may intensify symptoms of nervousness. The patient is unable to explain, which symptoms are reflex in nature.

One of the common causes of the enlargement of the rectal veins called hemorrhoids is a sluggish state of the portal circulation, going to the liver. Such a sluggish portal circulation may be caused by constipation, indigestion, or a sluggish state of the liver. Such a sluggish portal circulation may be caused by constipation, indigestion, or a sluggish state of the liver.

By far the most important single cause of hemorrhoids is a delay in the normal elimination. Those who are forced to strain to produce an evacuation will sooner or later develop an irritation which will result in hemorrhoids. The pressure of accumulated waste material is enough itself to stop the flow of blood as it leaves through the enlarged veins.

The internal hemorrhoids protrude from the inside of the body probably affect the nervous system more than the external hemorrhoids. At times, hemorrhoids may be so painful that the patient is unable to stand for long periods of time, or walking any distance, or sitting for several hours. Considerable suffering may also be noted in the case of hemorrhoids which will begin to bleed, although the loss of blood is not excessive. All in all, hemorrhoids constitute a very serious condition, and it is important that so many patients continue to endure their symptoms in silence when they could be given so much relief and made altogether free from discomfort of this kind.

In tomorrow's article I will discuss the treatment of hemorrhoids, outlining a simple home remedy which is effective in almost all cases to obtain temporary relief. This is the best treatment I have had many patients report that it provided a most welcome relief. Watch for the next article.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

QUESTION: Mr. H. L. O. writes: "How it is possible to be sure that the menopause is entirely over?"

ANSWER: The period known as the menopause extends for a variable length of time and there is practically no rule which may be depended upon in knowing definitely that the menopause is really over. It is a very common error to think that the menopause is a very common error, although the medical science does not yet have a conclusive answer.

QUESTION: Mr. H. L. O. asks: "I am suffering considerably from a pain in the right side and would like to know what is wrong. Could you give me some information about it?"

ANSWER: There is no way in which I could tell you exactly what is the cause of the pain in your particular case without first examining you. Probably the chief cause of an abdominal pain is colitis, which will produce a noticeable soreness. Or pain in the lower right-hand side of the abdomen may be due to a variety of causes, such as, for example, appendicitis, or a variety of causes, such as, for example, appendicitis, or a variety of causes, such as, for example, appendicitis.

A Day in Canadian History

On this date in 1873 a riot in Ottawa carried a coffin containing the body of Charles Connell, M.P. for Carleton county, N.B., who had died the previous day. Connell was postmaster general of New Brunswick when, in 1861, after the province had adopted the Canadian constitution, he was necessary to issue new postage stamps. Connell gave the order to a Montreal company and in due course the stamps appeared at Saint John and Fredericton. Then it was discovered that the stamps were a poor imitation of the original. Postmaster General Connell informed the House of Commons that there was a row. Well, rather. So much so that these stamps were never put into circulation; new ones bearing the queen's head were printed, but a few of the previous stamps were preserved as souvenirs. They are very rare as postal curiosities. The row over the stamps soon died down; at least the people of Carleton county did not think it a matter of any importance for in 1867 they elected Connell to the House of Commons by acclamation. He was re-elected in 1872, and his funeral showed the sorrow of Woodstock, where people will, if you ask, show you the monument of the grave of the postmaster general of New Brunswick who put his own face on a postage stamp.

PARI-MUTUELS OPERATE FOR HORSE RACES

No race fan can resist trying himself unless he can step up to a window and get visible proof of his horse-judging ability in the form of race tickets. Realizing this, the executive in charge of the South Side sports has made arrangements for mutual betting on the race track, make their choices and lay it on the line.

These races will be real tests of the bettor's ability to judge horses, since there will be no form sheets to guide them. Track fans will have to check over the race in the paddock, make their choices and lay it on the line.

With a few days already definitely assured and many more horses coming in from various parts of Alberta and Saskatchewan, Edmontonians will get a good start for a warm-up before the exhibition race meet here.

U.S. Drought Helps, Hinders Canuck Agrics

OTTAWA, June 22.—Immediate effects of the severe droughts in the United States both help and hinder the Canadian farmer, officials of the department of agriculture said last night.

The wheat market has been stiffened but the market for cattle has been off. Scarcity of feed has forced United States cattle on the market in large numbers, and expected to continue to do so.

Livestock officials here expect a increased movement of cattle to Great Britain. Capacity of shipping now in the cattle trade is 500 head one week and 1,000 the next. If the expected demand for space to load after range cattle, usually marketed in the fall, will entice more ships into the trade.

CHAPTER XII

THE day following Phil's request that Marcia leave immediately was Sunday. Because, now, there was no train with proper accommodations until late in the morning. Marcia laid out a cool gray suit, blue accessories, and a blue hat that gave her a more elegant air usually. She decided that she would have some orange juice and coffee in her room and slip away without going to anyone except Marion, who knew that she was leaving. Marion, though, interfered with this arrangement. "By the way, we must meet in the dining room and get our own breakfasts on Sunday when we have lots of people at the house," she said. "There'll be one maid on duty to keep the porcelains filled and the bread cut, but everybody brings his own toast and scrambles his own eggs."

Marcia silently eliminated breakfast from her schedule. She was sitting in her room, the blue hat on her face pale and her eyes ringed with violet, waiting for the alarm wagon, when Marion came into the room. "Marcia Cunningham, you look like the last of the seven plagues of Israel. What in the world is wrong with you? You can't just sit there! You have to have some breakfast before you go. You can't just sit there!"

So she went into the dining room and perfectly poured some coffee and scattered a waffle iron with butter. It was easier to pretend to cook than to explain that she was hungry. Phil was standing near the window, and his eyes were wandering, though he was making pancakes. Marcia was only making scrambled eggs.

Her own waffles were ready and she put them on a plate. They were a golden brown but she did not want them. To prolong the motion of doing something, she pretended that she would like some brown and then the waffle to keep them a golden, crisp brown she put it on the plate. Phil had drawn near. He had a coffee cup in one hand. "Phil, you haven't eaten?" she said. "Here, take this. I'll fix some more."

"Marcia, don't tempt me! That's a dish fit for a king instead of a poor creature!" He looked at it hungrily. "Can't get some pancakes and stuff ready for two or three of us and I'm pledged elsewhere?"

The last words had been unintentional, but the force of them brought the blue eyes and the gray eyes in a quick remembrance. Phil stopped eating, but Marcia's bright voice broke into the conversation. She was making a plate in each hand and Bob was with her.

"Here, my lollipops," she murmured to the two men—"I've prepared your food. Now drink your chairs and eat while I prepare yours. That's a beautiful waffle, Marcia."

The station wagon was rousing the crowd. Reluctantly, Marcia picked up her bag and gloves. The two men were thinking Marcia for her pancakes. With a quick goodbye to Marion, she slipped out of the room, ran across the veranda, climbed into the wagon.

She was running away again, running away this time because she had been asked to go. Phil might have been a little more attentive, she mused, the wagon started. Perhaps he really wanted to marry Marcia and she had been to interfere. She knew better, but she didn't know better. "Pre- Marcia, wait! Hey, driver!"

She heard a voice calling her. She knew that it came from Phil but she did not look back. "Never mind, please," she told the driver, steadying her voice as he would not know that her car was with tears. "I think we had better go."

There was no boat for three days, the learned in Phil. She looked for her return passage, and when she got to the theatre, she was surprised to find people with whom she had not believed a few weeks before. It did not matter what she did if she could get through the day until time to take passage on another ship.

The morning of the third day the clerk told her that Marcia was reserved once more. "On yes," she repeated. That meant that Phil had come too, and he would see that she got not left. Never mind, she would not get in his way.

"Both young gentlemen are with her," the clerk added. "There is to be a wedding at the American embassy at noon, but you probably know that."

"Yes, yes, of course," she answered and went out to walk in the rain that was just beginning. She sat on a bench in a park at the top of a high hill. She climbed hundreds of steps coming down. She decided, too, that she would take her luggage and go at once to the Chateau, to see what hotel it might hold, and stay there until the boat sailed the next afternoon at 6.

It was dusk when she came back to the hotel. She dragged aside to watch a porter carrying out some baggage. "C. M. M." she read the initials on the bag. Marcia Howe. The wedding was over. She saw more bags in the arms of another porter. "P. B." So there had been a wedding. Not until then did she realize that somewhere, in the far corners of her mind, she had been hoping that it might be Bob whom Marcia was marrying. She knew now. That was something. Her feet dragged as she walked to the elevator. She could feel the water coming in her slippers and did not care. A girl dressed in the car as Marcia waited for the passengers to leave. Glancing up, she saw Marcia.

"Marcia! We searched the city for you! We're me luck, honey!"

I'm married, and I wanted you there!"

"If you'll be ever so happy, Marcia, I know you will. Phil's a darling!" She wondered at the pleasure of her own voice.

"Phil? But it wasn't Phil. Marcia, I married Bob. Marcia's eyes grew wider and wider. "Camilla, you married Bob?"

The other girl sobbed. "I know what you are thinking—that Bob wanted money and I haven't any. The girl he did fall in love, Marcia. Forgive me for being so stupid. This girl that I haven't anything on her can wait it for me. This is turning out to be—well."

Then she was gone before Marcia could explain that she hadn't meant that at all—that she was surprised—she couldn't very well admit that she was delighted—that it wasn't Phil, but Phil's luggage was going somewhere.

Marcia hurried to the desk. "Mr. Kirby—when did he check out?"

"Two hours ago. His bags are following him to Cheltenham. He's gone to his boat."

"But there's no boat leaving for New York until tomorrow!"

"He's sailing for Rio de Janeiro!" So Phil was leaving, believing that she had not cared to answer when he called? He couldn't do that. He loved her.

"May I have a porter in a hurry?" she asked the clerk. "And prepare my luggage. I'm checking out immediately."

Have, gloves, suit, coats, those with a Paris label and those without, went into the bag. Toist articles, stockings, shoes, handkerchiefs were packed in a few minutes and the bags were closed. The porter put them in a cab and Marcia gave hurried directions.

"The boat train to Cheltenham." The rain was falling in a steady downpour when she reached the train that would take her to the big ship. The last-minute confusion of sailing was progressing a little wearily. Marcia felt lost. Phil had not been on the train and she had not found him on the tender. But he must be on the boat, and she had not seen him when the engines began to groan, and the gangplank was taken up. The night crew darker. She climbed the narrow iron steps to the upper deck and sat down in a lifeboat. What the confusion was over she would not know.

Then she saw him. He was standing near a smokestack, hands in his pockets, eyes on the vanishing coastline.

"Phil?" She called softly.

He turned, wonderingly, and called her "Marcia." His hands held two light blue shoes. "You're wearing her face. What are you doing?"

"Sailing."

"But the boat isn't going to New York. Marcia, this boat for South America. You mean you know?"

"I know," she answered. "I've never been the gladness that leaped into his eyes. 'The ship is going to Paradise,' she answered. 'That's a wonderful place, Paradise. I've never been there, but once you showed me a piece of Paradise.'"

THE END

The Debunker

By John Harvey Farney, Ph.D.

BATTLEFIELDS ARE NOT BLOODY

The stories that circulate about the bloody nature of battle are usually exaggerated. It was stated that at the Battle of the Marne, during the World War, the river ran with blood for three days. Similar stories have been made to the "Blood" River, Indiana, where the "Blood" River runs in Virginia and "Blood" Lane at Antietam. The truth is, blood runs in a river. The report that "Blood" runs in a river is a lie. The "Blood" river is a name for a river that is named after a battle. The "Blood" river is a name for a river that is named after a battle. The "Blood" river is a name for a river that is named after a battle.

Having his fun

What time did you say the next train to New York? "I asked a girl of the family waiting in the little drops." "I've told you it comes at 4:44, half a dozen times." The elderly station agent answered impatiently. "Can't you remember that?"

"Oh, I can remember the time all right," said the little yasal. "I just like to see your whiskers wobble when you say 4:44."
